TYPOGRAPHY

paragraph errors

This paragraph begins with the so-called paragraph indent and immediately after that the text is aligned to the left. In the next line there remains one hanging conjunction and this is the so-called orphan. Take some time to eliminate these shortcomings. The first paragraph here ends and on top of that with a typical widow.

When the number of words in the last line of a paragraph is less than the paragraph indentation of the next paragraph is also bad. That is, the widow (two words already this time) occurs as you can see again and here.

The background features a light cream color with several large, dark green, rounded shapes representing leaves. These leaves are decorated with various patterns: some have clusters of small, light pink dots, some have thin white outlines of leaf veins, and some have thin, light beige lines that swirl or loop around them. The overall style is soft and botanical.
